

The Lighthouse Keeper

Every evening at dusk the keeper climbed the ninety-two steps to the lamp room.

He trimmed the wick, polished the brass and wrote the weather in a green ledger.

Chapter Two

On the third night a storm came from the north and the harbor bell rang twice.

Nobody in the village slept until morning.